The Vale of Glamorgan is a unique and distinctive part of Wales, located immediately to the west of the capital city of Cardiff. It boasts a stunning Heritage Coastline, excellent schools and some of the most beautiful villages in Wales.

Forming part of the Cardiff Capital Region, the Vale is also home to Cardiff Airport and Bro Tathan, a leading UK aerospace location. The Vale boasts an enviable skills base and sites for investment, as evidenced by the decision of Aston Martin Lagonda to base its new state of the art manufacturing facility here, for the DBX and their electric vehicles.

We are keen to attract new investment and want to support existing businesses to grow. The Council will work closely with partners including Welsh and UK Governments to offer any practical support businesses may need. Identifying investment sites, accessing business support and signposting to grant funding are some of the things we can offer.

Unprecedented investment in transport links, our education system and the construction of over 9,000 new homes, make the Vale of Glamorgan one of the most desirable places to live, work and visit in the UK.

GATEWAY TO WALES

Qatar Airways preparing for takeoff at Cardiff Airport

Located in the heart of the Vale of Glamorgan, Cardiff Airport is the national airport for Wales and a key gateway to the UK for international business and leisure customers. 18 airlines currently operate out of Cardiff, offering access to a wealth of destinations around the world, including direct flights to global hubs in Doha and Amsterdam.

The Airport benefits from being located within the Cardiff Airport and St Athan Enterprise Zone, which offers unrivalled opportunities for investment in the site and surrounding areas. The associated Enterprise Zone offers a wider range of development sites and business accommodation, providing opportunities for the development of bespoke facilities or investment in existing accommodation.

Cardiff Airport has seen steady passenger growth over the last few years and continues to look ahead, having set out ambitious plans to develop the airport over the next 20 years. Its vision is to be a pioneering airport, making Wales proud.

Highlights of Cardiff Airport's Masterplan include:

- Deliver greater capacity to grow to three million passengers per annum and beyond;
- Attract new airlines, secure new routes;
- Develop opportunities for aviation, cargo, education, technology and innovation;
- New terminal incorporating SMART technology to enhance the customer experience;
- Develop new 4-star hotel offering conference facilities;
- New transport hub and car park.

ENTERPRISE ZONE

The Welsh Government is investing in the business infrastructure at the Cardiff Airport and St Athan Enterprise Zone. It is prioritised for next generation broadband, has a skilled local workforce, and excellent land and air transportation links, making it the perfect place for business investment and growth.

Sectors include aerospace, defence, automotive, manufacturing, engineering and creative. Its long history in these industries has provided the facilities, skills, experience and local supply chain to make the Cardiff Airport and St Athan Enterprise Zone a truly leading location for business.

There are long established links with Welsh universities and world class aerospace training providers that operate adjacent to the airport at the International Centre for Aerospace Training (ICAT).

Currently home to numerous businesses, including Cardiff Airport, British Airways Maintenance Cardiff (BAMC), E-Cube Solutions, Cardiff Aviation and to Aston Martin Lagonda's manufacturing and development facility.

“ Unconstrained vehicular access to the Aerospace Business Park is essential to allow it to compete on an international stage and maximise the economic benefits that come with such increased exposure. The Northern Access Road provides the business park with a fit for purpose access to major highway routes for vehicles of all sizes, including logistic. The new road will be able to accommodate successful future growth. This one project fulfils three equally important roles, and I am pleased Welsh Government has been able to invest in it. ”

► Ken Skates AM, Minister for Economy and Transport

The Lagonda Vision Concept

The iconic British carmaker Aston Martin Lagonda announced in 2016 that it would be opening a manufacturing location in St Athan. Impressed by the 90-acre site in St Athan, the Vale of Glamorgan beat off a number of rival sites to be the second manufacturing location for Aston Martin where it will produce its first luxury SUV, the DBX.

The benefits of the location in the Enterprise Zone included existing infrastructure for industrial activity. South Wales boasts a pool of high quality labour and a government that is actively involved in attracting inward investment.

The DBX is scheduled to be unveiled at the end of 2019 and built in a state of the art luxury manufacturing plant that will ultimately become the "Home of Electrification" when the marque's fully-EV models enter production.

Aston Martin's new battery electric vehicles will be made in the Vale of Glamorgan, which will also be the manufacturing home for its Lagonda brand.

Already home to some 200 employees, St Athan is nearing completion and construction of the production line is well underway. With production of the first prototype models in the second quarter of 2019 the workforce will continue to grow over the course of the year to more than 600 by the first quarter of 2020 as DBX production ramps-up.

"As the St Athan facility nears completion, there is a very real sense this is the start of a bold new era for Aston Martin Lagonda", said Dr Andy Palmer, Aston Martin Lagonda President and Group Chief Executive Officer. "The St Athan facility will initially commence with the production of our first SUV but will ultimately be a global centre of excellence for the production of luxury high performance EVs, including Lagonda: the world's first luxury electric automotive brand".

“ The luxury brand examined 20 potential locations around the world, mainly in North America, Eastern Europe and the UK. From the start of the process, St Athan was one of the frontrunners. ”

British Airways Maintenance Cardiff

“If you’ve ever travelled in a 747 – or numerous other types of Boeing – they’ll almost certainly have been cared for at some point by British Airways Maintenance Cardiff (BAMC).

As a centre of innovation excellence, the purpose-built maintenance site at Cardiff Airport plays a crucial role in guaranteeing some of the world’s most impressive aircraft are repaired to the highest possible standards, working quickly and diligently to ensure stringent safety checks are adhered to and the slightest sign of damage is spotted.

One of the key reasons behind the location of this fascinating facility, which celebrates its 25th year at the airport this year, is the availability of bright technical talent locally, as well as government support. Local colleges and universities provide many of the promising engineering prospects who take apprenticeships and help to tackle complex projects in the hangars, inspired by spaces such as the Aerospace Centre at the University of Wales, where British Airways opened a new extension in 2015.

Generations of the same families have worked here, and employees take enormous pride in the part they play in solving vital mechanical challenges. Excellent motorway links to British Airways’ main engineering base, at Heathrow, are another strategic strength for the company.”

INNOVATION

Renishaw plc

Renishaw plc is a world leader in engineering and science-based technologies employing 5,000 people globally. Some 95% of the FTSE 250 listed company's turnover is due to exports, with its largest markets being China, the USA, Germany and Japan.

The company's products are used by manufacturers globally to produce high quality components for industries such as aerospace, automotive, construction, agriculture and consumer electronics. Renishaw is also the UK's only manufacturer of metal additive manufacturing (3D printing) machines and also applies its expertise to healthcare applications such as dentistry, neurosurgery and facial reconstructive surgery.

In 2011 it purchased a 193-acre site in the Vale of Glamorgan, where it has now invested over £45 million to create a modern hi-tech manufacturing facility, plus a healthcare centre of excellence, R&D facilities and an education centre for schools.

Renishaw was attracted to the area due to the scale of the site which offered long-term growth potential, good transport links, a pool of skilled talent from across South Wales, plus proximity to a strong base of higher education establishments and potential engineering/life sciences partners.

To provide for its future development, the company has outline planning permission for 1.7 million sq ft of development at the site. The planned facilities will provide additional capacity for Renishaw and for other businesses to establish operations at the site.

“ The proximity of the Miskin site to good transport links, communities with engineering skills, and a wide variety of potential collaboration partners in engineering and life sciences, has given Renishaw the opportunity to create new centres of expertise and new jobs. ”

REGENERATION OF BARRY

Barry Waterfront

The town of Barry continues to be transformed through major regeneration projects in partnership with the Vale of Glamorgan Council. Historic landmark buildings are being brought back into successful commercial use, alongside new investment in the seafront and waterfront areas of the town.

The comprehensive regeneration of the 100 acre site has delivered a new road link to Barry Island, connecting this tourism hotspot with the development.

Around 2,000 new homes are being built alongside private investment in a new hotel and other retail ventures. The South Quay offers a key recreation destination serving the needs of both future residents and visitors. The relationship of the waterfront to the docks is recognised as a unique opportunity to provide community facilities that support water-based activities with the potential to develop a Barry Marina.

“ We are keen to attract new investment and want to support existing businesses to grow. The Council will work closely with Partners such as Welsh and UK Government to offer any practical support businesses may need. Identifying investment sites, accessing business support and signposting to grant funding are just some of the things we can offer. ”

Private investors show confidence in Barry Waterfront

Loftco is currently collaborating with the Council to build what it believes to be the first Urban High Street in the UK. The redeveloped Goodsheds will be a 24/7 scheme that reflects the dynamics of a fast evolving coastal town in the midst of significant regeneration.

This exciting project follows on from the recently refurbished mixed-use scheme in the Pumphouse nearby. The innovative redevelopment of a landmark building is made up of live work units, a gym and restaurants. A finalist on the Grand Design awards; it is widely regarded as one of South Wales' most successful regeneration projects.

Hang Fire Southern Kitchen

Having quit their long-standing London careers, Shauna and Sam embarked on a six-month road trip of a lifetime across America to discover the secrets of American barbecue. Soon after this they started running pop-up nights in Cardiff pubs. It was not long before this street food foray turned into a Welsh BBQ bonanza of epic proportions, with them winning the coveted 'Best Street Food' Award at the BBC Radio 4 Food and Farming Awards for their barbecue.

In 2016 they chose Barry Waterfront as the location for their first permanent restaurant. Situated in a lovingly restored Grade II Victorian Pumphouse, Hang Fire Southern Kitchen relies solely on fresh, ethical produce. All of this hard work paid off with the restaurant being named the best in the UK at the 2018 Observer Food Monthly Awards.

“The sense of community spirit is evident in Barry, and it also happens to be the biggest town in Wales. We fell in love with the Victorian Pumphouse, which boasts one of the biggest handmade chimneys in Wales - not bad for a smokehouse. Over the last 3 years we have created 22 brand new positions of employment and the vast majority of our team live locally.”

Hotel Development Opportunity

Nells Point, Barry Island

The Vale of Glamorgan Council is inviting bids from potential purchasers for the 999 year leasehold interest (at a peppercorn ground rent) of land at Nells Point, Barry Island.

Historically the site was last used as part of the Butlin's holiday camp at the island up until its closure in 1997. A portion of the site was sold to Bovis Homes for housing development in 1998 and a further portion was retained as public open space. The subject site is the land that remains and is currently partially used by the Council as additional car parking for the Island.

The Council are keen to secure purchasers committed to delivering a sustainable form of development at the site. Bidders must submit an outline business plan demonstrating a financially sustainable project, and the Council will favour bids that put forward sustainable tourism and leisure uses for all or part of the land. Consideration will also be given to bidders putting forward proposals that will generate tangible local regeneration benefits during both the construction phase and the operation of the end use.

In this respect the successful purchaser will be required to contractually commit to delivering a community and social benefits package.

LIGNIA Wood Company

LIGNIA Wood Company Ltd, a producer of sustainable modified wood based in Barry, has secured £7.5 Million, comprising £3 Million funding from London-based investment manager Downing LLP, £2 Million from the Development Bank of Wales and £2.5 Million from existing investor Woodford Investment Management.

The company is helping to tackle issues around the limited supplies of legal and sustainable hardwoods – such as reducing deforestation and increasing sustainability awareness - by producing a modified timber with the brand name LIGNIA®.

LIGNIA is manufactured from pine sourced from sustainably-managed plantations which is impregnated with resin to make a modified timber that has a better appearance, durability, stability and fire resistance than many high value hardwoods such as oak and teak. The Company's first commercial scale production plant will be able to produce up to 15,000m³ annually.

Sean Moore, Wales' Investment Director at Downing, said "Wales is proving a very interesting place for us to find opportunities at the moment, whether it's amongst the technical talent in Cardiff or innovative local businesses like LIGNIA Wood Company outside the capital."

“ As an SME Manufacturer setting up in the Vale one of the features we have found most useful is the ‘sign-posting’ of business help on the Vale’s website and the events organised. We have found the planning department helpful and professional especially when setting up a first of its kind process in the UK. ”

Oakwater Interiors

Having worked alongside his father in the family building firm and understanding how rewarding and self-fulfilling it is to watch your own business grow and flourish, Nicholas felt inspired to set up his own business in the same industry. Nicholas has received mentoring and regularly attends The Vale Start-up Club run by the Council. In the three years since starting his business, it continues to grow and flourish, today employing 6-12 contractors per project and has expanded its business portfolio to include property development.

“ The Vale's internal business support is fantastic; it has helped Oakwater grow organically and efficiently. Cobbles Kitchen and Deli

In 2016 Chloe quit her sales job to open a cafe in an almost derelict barn. Chloe was supported with a bursary of £3,000 to help start the business, enabling her to purchase equipment and to market the new business. Following rapid growth, Chloe soon realised that she would need more support.

With the help of Development Bank of Wales and Welsh Government rural EU funding, she expanded into the adjoining barns, adding a new commercial kitchen and equipment to take the business to the next level. Cobbles is a flourishing business that continues to receive support through the Vale Council and Business Wales mentors. In 2018, Cobbles won Welsh Restaurant of the Year in the Food Awards and 2019 has seen the opening of Cobbles Deli in the coastal town of Llantwit Major.
